ECONOMIC SCHOLARS PROGRAM

The Economics Scholars Program (ESP) is a collaborative effort between academic institutions across Ohio, Kentucky, and Pennsylvania and the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland. ESP is a free economic research conference that invites student scholars and faculty to come together and share undergraduate student-initiated or student-faculty coauthored works, cultivate imaginative research, gain valuable experience presenting at a professional conference, learn about internship and employment opportunities with the Federal Reserve, and network with peers. The 2022 hybrid ESP conference will be held April 29, 2022.

The Economic Scholars Program Conference is led by and for undergraduate students who have conducted research on economics and business topics or would like to formerly participate in one of the following roles:

- Peer Review Board
- Paper Presentation
- Poster Presentation
- Discussant
- Session chair
